In this month's editorial 'Heads, tails or heads and tails: getting entangled with quantum', our Director, Nick Bush shares his reflections on our October Showcase that focused on how this discipline offers a wide range of opportunities to solve issues that would otherwise be impossible to tackle with a traditional approach. If you missed the event, you can watch a recording here.

Earlier this month we also hosted the 2022 CMCE Research Awards that provided an opportunity to celebrate some excellent and highly-relevant research into management consultancy. During the event, Michael Mainelli, co-founder of Z/Yen, the City of London's leading commercial think-tank and venture firm, which promotes societal advance through better finance and technology, delivered a thought-provoking keynote speech: 'Why Winning Matters'. In case you missed it or would like to see it again, you can access a full recording here. You can also find links to all the winning papers and the other resources referenced during the event on our website. In addition, look out for more details on future events, including our next Showcase on 8th February. All details all will be shared on our website and our LinkedIn page over the next few weeks.

We also share 'Business Process Documentation: a key factor in a business's successful growth and development', a piece written by Nicholas King FCCA, CA, CIA, MBA, Founder & CEO of Royal Consulting Services Inc., who was also one of the panellists in our series of Next Gen discussions on the post-pandemic world of work. In his piece, Nicholas discusses the importance for organisations to have a business process documentation and explores its multiple advantages, spanning from quality control and risk management to increased levels of transparency and accountability.

As usual, our In-Brief section features a series of articles and podcasts focusing on current topics that this month include flexible working, women's experience in the workplace and productivity. In addition, we share a piece commemorating the fact that our friends at Harvard Business Review have been celebrating the 100th anniversary since the publication of HBR first issue. We will share more on this topic in our December issue, where CMCE Director and your newsletter Editor will share their key takeaways from attending the HBR anniversary event that took place in London earlier this month.

Finally, we are in the process of creating next year's editorial calendar of our Newsletter and would welcome contributions from our readers and the wider CMCE community. So, if you are subject matter expert and would like to share your knowledge and expertise on a specific topic, please read further to find out how to write an editorial contribution for the CMCE Newsletter. This is a great opportunity to reach out to our varied audience of academics and practitioners in management consulting and related fields. If you have a content idea, get in touch on info@cmce.org.uk

We look forward to hearing from you!
